Businesses Adapt: Creative Approaches During COVID

Backyard nuptials instead of a big wedding bash means you do things a little differently—like hop on paddleboards after your vows. With elopements one of her specialties, photographer Allie Dearie was ready to join couples as they tie the knot now in small ceremonies, with the family and friends celebration rescheduled for a later date.

Dearie, a member of the Chamber’s Young Professionals, regularly takes couples from engagement to the big day. This additional photo shoot just adds another opportunity to develop her client relationship. “Getting to document that really intimate elopement is bringing us even closer,” she said. It is also helping her meet client needs during a difficult time in her industry.

Weddings are just one more way daily lives and major life events are shifting during the coronavirus, and businesses are shifting in a million ways to adapt. At the core of successful approaches is defining and meeting customer needs. Oh yeah, and a LOT of flexibility.

A queen of flexibility, Shannon Walker of Crowned Fit in Groton redesigned her business overnight when gyms were closed by the state. With a deeply personal commitment to helping clients be physically and mentally fit, Walker started online classes the next day in a Facebook group.

A SPECIAL THANK YOU | Through their commitment to the Chamber, these companies have demonstrated support for the many smaller businesses we serve.
During the pandemic, safety is pro-business

This letter from Chamber President and CEO Tony Sheridan appeared as an Op-Ed in The Day on May 24, 2020

Time and again, eastern CT has shown the rest of the state our mettle and ability to unify around a cause. An all-out effort pulled the SUBASE off the BRAC list, we supported our military families during the government furlough, and everyone lent a hand in the aftermath of Hurricane Sandy. As a region, we have a history of looking out for each other and coming out of adversity stronger.

In this next phase of the state’s COVID response, we can demonstrate once again how we rise above partisanship and approach situations with common sense and a prevailing commitment to our community.

We are proud that the region has rallied around our small businesses, supporting them as they complied with state guidelines. Now as businesses reopen, we have the opportunity to show them even greater support.

It is essential that we all help businesses follow the state guidelines for safety. Only businesses that meet requirements for masks, social distancing and cleaning will be able to operate. As their loyal customers, we can promote their success by observing all the rules as well.

Eastern Connecticut maintains the lowest number of cases of coronavirus in the state because of our early and committed response. We can keep businesses open, restore jobs, reopen tourism venues fully, and fuel the economy if we keep these numbers low.

The Chamber of Commerce of Eastern CT is pleased to help businesses reopen. This week, we will be distributing, free of charge, 5,000 masks that we received from Connecticut’s sister state in China, Shandong province. We will be sharing these masks with our members and nonmembers while supplies last.

To obtain masks, visit ChamberECT.com/Masks, where you will find a request form to be completed.

Through our work on the reopening CT task force we have assisted in compiling a resource reopening guide that includes suppliers, financial needs, employee training and physical layout. A resource page on the Chamber website links to this guide. There you will also find a list of local businesses that can help with your reopening needs: ChamberECT.com/Reopening.

A successful reopening is crucial. We cannot afford a resurgence of infections in the coming months that would bring our economy to another halt.

It’s time to unite around our businesses and organizations. Our best course of action now is to follow the guidance of health experts and scientists to control the spread of COVID-19. It is the most effective way to show our appreciation for the sacrifices made by our front-line workers, to create an environment where our businesses can operate safely for staff and customers, and to keep the economy running.

Mystic Luxury Cinemas have adopted creative approaches when their primary business was shutdown this spring. Movie rentals and popcorn sales (with REAL butter) focus on what they can do in the new environment. Lorraine McBride, Director of Sales and Marketing, shared that patrons drove the changes: “My inspiration comes from the loyal customers. They are very supportive.”
